leaders understand that there is a genuine, wide-spread U.S. concern for human rights. Carter surely reflected a pop-ular feeling when he emphasized the issue in his campaign, and when he spokein his inaugural address of people around the world "craving basic human rights."

Americans are especially interested in the Soviet situation. The brutal treatment of dissenters arouses intense sympathy here, as indeed it does in Western Europe, because the afflicted individuals are enough like us so that we identify with them - and because their stories are often such nightmares of cruelty.

In a letter to Carter, Sakharov mentioned 15 current Soviet victims. Any one of those cases would arouse any thoughtful person in the West: Pyotr Ruban, for example, sentenced to eight years in a labor camp and five more in internal exile for making a wooden Statue of Liberty in honor of the Bicentennial; Dr. Mikhail Stern, eight years on crudely fabricated charges of soliciting bribes for medical left for Israel; Semyon Gluzman, a psychiatrist, sent to a labor camp for defending the sanity of a dissenter who was kept in a psychiatric ward.

Concern about such uncivilized Soviet official behavior is not ĵust a cles of soft-hearted U.S. liberals. It is a political fact of life, in the U.S. and one that has to be understood if detente is to have a lasting place in Soviet-American relations.

Failure to understand that proved deeply damaging, perhaps fatal, to the Nixon-Kissinger version of detente that the U.S. had implicitly suppression of human rights. That seemed a soulless kind of detente, and it lost support right across the political spectrum. Public opinion can certainly not be expected to support a new effort for improved relations now unless there are elements of hope for greater humanity in Soviet

The new candor on human rights has to be accompanied by vigorous moves toward other desirable goals in Soviet-American relations. The administration must persuade the Soviets that the American feeling about human rights is real

Such a one has the three' well-known "bigs" been in the cabinet for 10 years and his present department for well over four years.
So as John Munro, the

The myth which must be challenged is "big labor." The Canadian labor movement is neither so big nor so strong as would be the binding of "a cohesive national labor organization"; and it would be a part of the economic system that was taken for granted, not something seen as almost outside it or as an adversary

What Price a University Degree?

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN The Progressive

The gap between the average income of high school graduates and the average income of college graduates is shrinking. In 1969, male college graduates between the ages of twenty-five and thiry-four were paid 33 per cent more per year than male high school graduates. By 1974, that gap had dropped to 15 per cent. Among women, the shrinkage has also been impressive. College women used to make 42 per cent more in wages, but that figure is now down to about 29

Why aren't college graduates as valuable, relative to other workers, as they used to be? Maybe they never were more valuable, but simply more expensive. Christopher Jencks, one of our foremost students of American educational arrangements, writes, "Nobody knows quite what, if anything, most students learn in college that makes employers want to hire them in preference to high school graduates The idea that a particular job requires college training depends on social norms, and it seems to feed on itself. This means that the demand can increase even if there is no technical reason for it to do so.

Jencks points out that many occupations reserved for college graduates were put in that category by college graduates who wanted to limit the competition for their jobs. upgrade their own salaries, and speed up the payback for their investment in college.

Of course, there is another way of protecting the college alumni from wage equality with non-alumni: Cut back on college graduate production. That can be accomplished by weakening student aid programs, raising tuition, and generally seeing to it that only the children of the well-to-do can attend college without making near-heroic efforts. Such a policy might also make it easier to manipulate the labor force in order to kick up the number of people available to do

There is no evidence to suggest our expensive and wasteful system of higher education even begins to earn back its costs, but we could pass a law forcing employers to pay college graduates more. We are a people who do love to pass

Cavorting Crows Turn the Pendulum

You might say it all began with four crows. Yes, four crazy, clowning crows — at least I'm prepared to give them

It, in case you've begun to wonder, is what I call my Personal Annual Turning Point (T.P. for short), the point — its timing varies from year to year but seems to be later with each succeeding year — when my outlook on life takes a sud-den turn for the better, changing from mid-winter pessimism

Each October, as autumn slowly drifts into winter - and particularly after we make that annual adjustment back to standard time - I find myself slowing down, both physically and psychologically.

* * * The physical slow-down I can live with, it seems a

The physical slow-down I can live with, it seems a perfectly normal mammalian reaction to approaching winter, but that psychological slow-down is something else.

Its principal manifestation is a deep and abiding sense of doom and gloom. Fortunately, while the physical doldrums often hang on 'til March, the psychological low is a short-lived phenomenon, one usually ended shortly after the New Year with some cheering natural event, my so-called T.P.

This year, those four crows did the trick

This year, those four crows did the trick.

It was an innocent enough incident, one which, when measured against all the other exciting things that can be seen here in winter, might seem unusually prosaic to have accomplished so much. Of course, timing may have had a lot to do with the effect it had on me, coming as it did during one of the brief but welcome afternoon sunny breaks that punctuated our recent and prolonged affair with low cloud

Whatever the reason, just one look at those four crows cavorting about high over Victoria Golf Course, against a deep blue sky, and in brilliant sunlight, and all my winter depressions were behind me. There was something about the way those crows abandoned themselves to their game that seemed to say "Come what may, everything is up from here

Ever since I first became ay are of these annual lows in my life, I've looked forward to the little events that brought me out of them. When living in Manitoba, a bright, albeit , late January day was sometimes enough. Or simply the sudden realization that, because I was going to work and coming home in daylight, the days were getting longer might turn the tide. I could never predict when it would happen or what would do the job and often what worked one year might pass without effect the next. Which suggests that something inside me had to be ready, otherwise nothing! Since moving to the coast, where winter begins to show cracks in its armor much sooner and in much greater variety than on the plains, I've found my T.P.'s to be even more un-

One year, I think it was my first out here, the sight of snowdrops in a December garden was the key. Another time it was a Meadowlark on Cobourg Spit: Meadowlarks are true harbingers of spring on the plains, not the quiet, unobtrusive residents they are here. And there was the time when, on one of our rare clear nights. Orion in his usual winter station high in the southern sky told me that all was as it should be and that winter, true to form, would soon become spring.

* * * But best remembered was that day in January last year when, after a week of snow on the ground around the house, overnight a flood of mild air moved in off the Pacific bring-ing with it a brief, warm rain and sudden clearing. The next morning the air was full of that fresh sweet smell of spring. the temperatures had shot up, and the sun rose to the strains of the bubbling song of a Bewick's Wren.

Three or four times that wren gave forth with springtime fervor and then shut up, not to be heard again for nearly a month. It was enough. I had turned the corner for another year and never looked back.

But that wren last year, like the crows last week, made me wonder if they too had their lows and if, through some strange chemistry of sunlight and air, we'd all reached our T.P.'s simultaneously

Whatever, if you're like me and have your mid-winter lows, try a little crow-watching. It might bring on your T.P.

The following text is taken from the address given by Professor Lawrence B. Smith, Associate Chairman Department of Political Economy, University of Toronto, on the occasion of the 1976 Canadian Real Estate Association Convention in Quebec City.

The Myth of a Housing Crisis

The largest myth associated with housing in Canada is the notion that there is an acute housing crisis. Since the view is widespread, even among politicians and the press, that a crisis is indicated by a high cost of housing, by a low vacancy rate for rental accommodation, by a backlog for subsidized housing and by a decline in housing starts during the last two years, it is worth considering whether Canada has a general housing crisis. The evidence clearly is that except for a few special groups, such as the elderly, there is not a housing crisis.

such as the elderly, there is not a housing crisis.

First, in terms of basic facilities such as piped hot and cold water, flush toilets, baths, etc., things which we all take for granted now but which 25 years ago almost half of Canada's housing did not have. Canada's housing ranks at the top in the Second, in terms of occupancy and crowding Canada's hous ing ranks at the top. The percentage of families not maintaining their own households (i.e., doubled-up) was a relatively small 3.5% in 1971, the proportion of households with more than one person per room was a very small 9.4% in 1971, and the average mber of rooms per person in 1971 was 1.6, which tied for the highest internationally

Third, in terms of affordability of housing Canada has done well. A recent study by the Fraser Institute shows the proportion of income spent for housing services in 1972 was 16.1%, compared to 18.6% in 1962, 16.0% in 1969, and the generally accepted rule of thumb of 25%. Between 1961 and 1975 the tenancy cost component of the consumer price index rose only 37.3% and the home ownership component rose 150%, while personal disposable income per capita rose 207%. Moreover, the claim that only 15% of Canadians can afford to own their own dwelling is a complete myth since over 65 of do now. On the other hand, housing costs are relatively high for a variety of reasons including excessive government regulation and excessive demand stimulating policies. Fourth, in terms of new construction the Canadian con struction industry has performed well. Although 1974-5 apartment starts were down 32% from 1973 and 33% from the 1968-69 average, single dwelling starts were down only 6% from 1973 and were up 60% from the 1968-69 average. Between 1961 and and were up 60% from the 1968-98 average. Between 1961 and 1975 Canadian housing starts more than doubled net family formation, and even in 1974-75 when housing starts declined substantially they were approximately 2.5 times net new family formation, and the housing stock increased more quickly than new family formation or the population. Finally, since 1972 residential construction expenditure averaged 5.4% of GNP compared to 4.8% for the U.S. Consequently, it is clear that where the market was not overly controlled and sufficient demand existed as in the single dwelling sector, the constriction mand existed, as in the single dwelling sector, the construction industry had the capacity to satisfy it.

Thus, in terms of the quality of housing, the availability of housing, the aftordability of housing, and the capacity of the residential construction industry there is no indication of a

But then one might ask" if there really is no housing shortage why do some households spend 40% or more of their income for shelter, and why is the vacancy rate in apartments so

Looking first at the proportion of family income spent for shelter, the fact that some households devote a high proportion of their income to housing does not indicate by itself that housing is in short supply or that it is too costly. It might simply indicate that these households wish to spend a high proportion of their income for housing, or more likely that their incomes are too low. Given the relatively low proportion of income spent on housing by the population as a whole it most likely indicates that some groups, such as the elderly, simply have incomes that are too low to enable them to consume a satisfactory level of housing services. It should also be noted that this does not in-dicate a housing problem since these groups will also have in-comes that are too low to let them consume a satisfactory level of lood nutrients, clothing, or other necessities. Thus, the fact that some households devote a high proportion of their income to housing indicates an income distribution or a social welfare problem which should be met by income distribution and social welfare policies, not by housing policies.

ooking next at the vacancy rate in apartn 1975% and fallen to 1.2% compared to an average of 3.6% for 1965-74, it must be remembered that a low vacancy rate is evidence of a below equilibrium or bargain rent more than an apartment shortage. In the last few years rents have been very low compared to other consumer prices and this has led to a shift in consumption patterns in favour of more housing services. Thus, a low vacancy rate does not necessarily mean a real shortage of apartments since many people are demanding apartments at the bargain price who would not normally demand them at an equilibrium price. This is readily apparent by the fact that 34% of the increase in the housing stock and more than half of the increase in the apartment stock between 1961 and 1971 was occupied by the creation of non-family households. If this proportion had been reduced slightly by children remaining longer in the family home or by some single person households doubling-up, the demand would have been considerably less and the vacancy rate considerably higher without any real reduction in Another way to view this is to ask how much rents would have to rise to obtain a desired vacancy rate. Based on econometric studies I estimate that it would take only an 8% increase in real rents, i.e. with all other things including other prices held constant, to generate an immediate 4% vacancy rate, and an increase of only 6.5% to generate it gradually over about a 6 year period. Since rents have risen much less than consumer prices and incomes over the past few years and since consumer prices and incomes over the past tew years and since only a relatively small increase in real rents is required to restore a normal vacancy rate, the existing low vacancy rate does not indicate a present housing shortage. However, if rents are artificially constrained by controls at these bargain levels for much longer they will create a severe housing crisis. For example, I estimate that in 1975 before rent controls were prevalent just over half these increases in real rents were required to restore a satisfactory vacancy rate (i.e. a 4.3% inquired to restore a satisfactory vacancy rate (i.e. a 4.3% increase for an immediate 4% vacancy rate and a 3.5% increase for a 4% vacancy rate over 6 years)

The Myth of High Mortgage Costs

Another major myth is that the cost of mortgages is prohibitive or that high mortgage costs are-responsible for the decline in housing starts. First, housing starts in 1975 were the fourth highest in history, being only 14% below the 1973 peak and 7% below the second high in 1972. Second, between 1971 and 1975 the conventional mortgage rate rose only 21% compared to 66% for residential construction costs, 58% for average hourly earnings in construction, and 59% for the cost of land for new NHA homes. If construction and land costs each had increased by the same 38% that the consumer price index rose, the increase in the cost of new housing (applying the increase in mortgage costs to the increase in construction and land costs) would have barely exceeded the increase in personal disposable income per capita, being 67% compared to 63%. Thus, although the increase in mortgage costs restrained demand for new residential construction, the major restraint came from the large increase in construction costs (both labour and materials) and in land costs

Third, although nominal mortgage costs are high by historical standards, the real cost of mortgage credit is quite low. In the economy there is a close relationship between the rate of interest and the rate of inflation, such that the long term market rate of interest will approximate the real productivity of capital plus the expected rate of inflation. When there is a persistent rate of inflation, such as during the past few years, this rate soon becomes expected for the future and incorporated into interest rates. For example, if people expect the rate of inflation to continue around 10%, and if the real productivity of capital is about 2%, the long term riskless rate of interest (the rate on long term government bonds) should approximate 12%, and the mortgage rate should approximate $13^{1}z$ to 14%. A 12% mortgage rate, therefore, is below the rate that is consisten with a long term rate of inflation of 10%, and the mortgage rate cannot be considered too high relative to the general rate of inflation. High mortgage rates are just the reflection of the high rate of inflation and complaints about the high cost of nortgages should really be about the high rate of inflation

On the other hand, although a high mortgage rate is the natural consequence of a high expected rate of inflation, a high interest rate in the early years of a high inflation rate does cause a cash flow problem for a house purchaser because his in-come has not had time to rise with inflation and he cannot realize the capital gains inflation brings in the value of his house. For example, when the rate of inflation increases from 5% to 10%, the equilibrium mortgage rate will rise from approximately 9% to 14%, and the annual costs of homeownership mortgage payments, taxes, heat, utilities etc.) will increase by approximately 30% to 35%. During this time, since the gain in the capital value of the house is not realized, and the rate of increase in family income will only rise from approximately 80 to 13%, the proportion of a family's income devoted to homeownership would have to rise considerably. This creates a cash flow problem which prevents many families from acquir ing a home. Over time, however, the higher inflation will in-crease the capital value of the home and cause family incomes to continue to rise so that, with a constant mortgage rate, the real cost of homeownership will fall. Although the higher mortgage rate and higher rate of inflation do not reduce the desirability of homeownership, they do reduce the demand for nomeownership and the volume of residential construction by increasing the required cash flow in the early years. However this process occurs not because mortgage costs are too high but because capital market imperfections inhibit the realization of capital gains and create cash flow deficiencies, and these problems can be overcome by altering the mortgage instru-

The Myth of Mortgage Subsidies

Despite the above analysis, proposals persist to stimulate residential construction by subsidizing mortgage costs and forcing financial institutions to allocate additional funds to the mortgage market. These proposals clearly misunderstand the present situation and the operation of the capital market. The capital market operates by allocating the funds of surplus groups to deficit groups, primarily to finance new investments Ignoring frictions in the capital market, the allocation is based on the relative yields offered by different borrowers, so that if house purchasers desire more mortgage credit they will bid the mortgage rate up relative to alternative security yields and increase their share of investible funds. Funds are thus allocated according to the relative strength of the demand of various borrowers. If the mortgage rate does not rise sufficiently to attract more funds into the housing market, it indicates either that the claim for funds for housing is not as strong as claims in other sectors of the economy, such as the industrial sector, or that market frictions and restrictions prevent the market mechanism from working. Although housing critics are quick to proclaim market failure, the preponderance of the evidence refutes this and suggests the capital market does in fact work quite well. Consequently, in recent years the market is saying quite well. Consequently, in recent years the market is saying that there is not an unusually high demand for funds for housing relative to the demands of other sectors.

If the government were nevertheless to follow a policy of subsidizing mortgage costs to borrowers, so that the demand for mortgage credit was artificially stimulated, or if the government were to pursue a policy of forcing financial institutions to shift their investment portfolios more heavily into mortgages, the pure allocative mechanism of the capital market would be broken and housing would be favored at the expense of other sectors, notably the industrial sector. The government would be subsidizing housing at the cost of reduced expansion in the industrial sector, and there is little evidence to suggest that this trade-off would be beneficial for Canadians.

The Realities of Government Intervention

So much for the myths. Turning to the realities, the real problem with housing in Canada is not a current insufficiency of supply, nor high prices, nor high mortgage costs. Rather, the problem with housing in Canada is the likely future deterioration in housing quality and standards as a result of massive government intervention in the market.

The excellent housing standards we enjoy today are a legacy of the past co-operation between government and private enterprise when government sought to remove market distortions and encourage the private sector. However, in the 1970s government policy shifted dramatically. This shift coincided with the adoption of the belief that housing is not a good whose consumption should be subject to the usual income constraint like any other good, but is a basic right; and that decisions concerning its production and distribution should not be left to the market but must be politically determined.

The increasing acceptance of this belief prompted governments at all levels to intervene more actively and directly in the market, and caused Canadian housing policy to undergo a com-plete transformation during the first half of the 1970s. Rather than continue to assist and improve the market system that, despite its shortcomings, had provided an extremely impressive standard of housing for most Canadians, government policy increasingly took the form of direct intervention and regulation. Federal and provincial intervention took the form of specific housing policies such as the actual construction or the subsidization of construction of new dwellings for low income families, the provision of rental assistance and cash grants to home buyers, the introduction of rent control, and revisions to Landlord and Tenant Acts. It also took the form of non-specific housing policies such as tax reform in 1971, the introduction of new tax legislation such as the Ontario land speculation transfer taxes, controls on foreign investment through the Foreign Investment Review Act, and specific regulations as part of the anti-inflation controls program. Municipal intervention took the form of down-zoning, height limitations, imposts, servicing delays, building freezes and prohibition on adult-only

These policies have had a cumulative effect on the market and created major disruptions and distortions in the housing sector. The effects of these policies have been: 1) to virtually destroy the private rental market or at least the

- construction for private ownership of non-low income rental
- to replace private rental housing with public or non-profit rental housing for low income households,
- to encourage the demand for home ownership;
- 4) to impede the production of future housing, and 5) to use the housing sector to redistribute income toward
- lower income households.

 Many of these effects not only discourage investment in new housing but, possibly even more important, they also encourage disinvestment or deterioration in the existing housing stock Deterioration in the existing stock takes time and cannot be measured easily until it has gone on for a lengthy period. However, an indication of the impact of these policies on housing starts can be seen from changes in the composition of housing starts. ing starts in 1975 and even though the effects of rent control foreign investment control and the Ontario land speculation and transfer taxes are not fully reflected.

In 1975 private multiple starts were only 50,238 units or 21.7% of all housing starts (and many of these were con dominium units) compared to an average of approximately 76,000 units or 43.6% of all housing starts in 1965-69; and total multiple starts were only 70.361 units or 30.4% of all starts compared to an average of approximately 85,000 units or 48.2% of all starts in 1965-69. Early figures for 1976 indicate recent policies are reinforcing these declines. During the first 9 months of 1976 building permits in Metro Toronto were issued for only 153 apartment units compared to 1,490 units during the cor-responding period a year earlier.

In 1975 government assisted low income starts were 19.3% of all housing starts compared to 6.2% in 1965-69, and 13.7% of all housing starts were subsidized under the Assisted Home Ownership Plan.

The nature of the Canadian housing market has thus changed dramatically in the last few years in response to government policies. Most of these policy changes are the result of a substantial philosophical shift with respect to housng and not the result of a market failure. Conseque are likely to be quite harmful to our standard of housing. Unless government soon recognizes the implications of their policies and moves to reverse the destruction of the private sector, the story of housing during the next decade will be quite different than the previous few decades, and 10 years from now the hous ing crisis will be a reality and not a myth.

tem, tabled in the Commons, concludes that unemployment insurance "will continue to play a central role-as the first line of defence against temporary interruptions of earnings."

Manpower Minister Bud

Cullen said findings in the 350-page document provide the background for current legislation and a proposal now before the House to toughen employment insurance.

The report, prepared by the staff of the Unemployment Insurance Comfission and out-side consultants, says that unemployment insurance expenditures now are the equivalent of about 10 per cent of the federal budget and 2.1 per cent of the Gross National

The report says the effectiveness of placement, counselling, job creation and train-

A bill now before the Com-mons would merge operations of the unemployment insur-ance commission with Canada Manpower, the national job-finding agency, to provide a one-stop service for the unemployed.

The bill also would toughen the standards, by requiring claimants to work at least 12 weeks out of 52 in order to qualify for benefits. The quali-

The report says extension of the qualifying period would mean a reduction in unemployment insurance costs, increased acceptance by the public "which considers enand encouragement of individ-uals to remain in employment for longer periods.

But the report also lists disadvantages resulting from increased entrance requirements. The negatives include the strong impact on regions with high unemployment rates and shortages of long-term jobs.

The report says another result could be the "reduction of income for those with legitifate need, although the quesdropped from the unemployment insurance rolls if the qualifying period goes to 12 weeks. Of those, 35,800 would come from the unemployment-plagued Atlantic provinces and Cuebec.

The report says Canada has the fastest-growing labor force of any industrialized Western economy. The work force now is estimated at 10.3

There has been a heavy inflow of women and youths in the labor force "whose skills do not adequately match the increasing demand for new skills," the report says.

"This has resulted in persistently high unemployment rates for youth and increasing unemployment rates for women."

Many are thinking it could be a good business to quit, in fact.

Just what constitutes a plates, $24 to the Public Utilible. So let's have a debate.

Taxi drivers work hard.

Ten-hour shifts, often six days a week. And they don't stand to make a fortune for all the standard to make a fortun to make a fortune for all that work. They do, though, have to hand over a large slab-for what they make to an every-growing row of outstretched hands.

And they wonder how the city has the right to increase the fee from $30 to $70 (about not the same thing at all."

The cabbies object to the increase because they say they get absolutely nothing from city hall. But Callan from city hall. But Callan Driving a taxi isn't everyone's idea of Heaven.

A lot of those who do it regularly used to think it wasn't so bad, but now after the latest blow by city fall even they are starting to have second thoughts.

And, of course, it doesn't wasn't so good business to quit, in fact.

To the 30 per cent fleet discount. Trouble is, that's decidation, says the association has helped keep the price down to fleet's record as a whole isn't good enough, no one gets the discount. Usually they end up after the latest blow by city fall even they are starting to have second thoughts.

And, of course, it doesn't wasn't so bad, but now agreed enough, no one gets the discount. Usually they end up after the latest blow by city fall even they are starting to have second thoughts.

And, of course, it doesn't wasn't so bad, but now agreed enough, no one gets the discount. Usually they end up for each care the owners and in the fleet's record as a whole isn't so now.

Ti think right now it's lair, wasn't stougher on the customers, it is good and thoughts.

And, of course, it doesn't wasn't so bad, but now agreed even the latest blow by city fleet's record as a whole isn't show.

The first owners are the taxion beloed keep the price down to the fares up because the taxion business is slow, particularly busin

Max Bloomneid of Budeon. Cabs was, like many others, puzzled.

"If they, (the Arti-Inflation Board guidlines) work for every shouldn't to set their rates and check their vehicles.

"There's a fair amount of time spent on taxi cabs," he says. "I would venture to say we were losing money when it 'was $30."

Barry English of the city's police traffic department agrees.

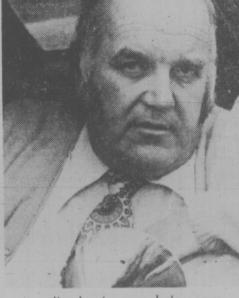

"A few guys are crying the blues about it but I think they are way out of line," he says. "They have been getting the wards for years."

Board guidlines) work for everybody else, why shouldn't they work for the city?" he wanted to know.

And so he phoned the AIB office in Vancouver to ask. Atta-boy, Max!

He didn't get much comfort, though. What he did get was this gorgeous and quite typical reply from a government official:

"Oh, I guess they're just catching up."

Eight Apartments Sell Quickly

CALGARY (CP) — Eight apartment buildings in Edmonton and Calgary changed hands twice this week as part five multi-million dollar real estate deals, according to a Vancouver businessman.

Nelson Skalbania confirmed sale of the buildings but denied earlier published reports which offered estimates of the selling price ranging between S59 and $78 million, saying the price was "less than $50 million."

Skalbania, who also is part and Meadowlark Village, Crescentplace, Geneva Garden Westmount, Maytield, Cornell Court and Village East, all in Edmonton.

Mysterious, Majestic . . . and 'Tough as Old Boots'

I remember the day when she became my Queen. For some ordinary reason, I had gone to the office early, and as I entered it a colleague said to me: "The King is dead." Not quite taking in what he had said, I nevertheless answered: "Long live the Queen." That is one way in which monarchy works. There is a ritual phrase which can accommodate every occasion. The shout of the heralds, "The King is dead! Long live the Queen!" proclaims that not even for a split second With the last breath of the dying sovereign,, the new sovereign draws her first! Even though she might not know that she had become Queen, as in this case, be-cause she was far away in a tree top in Africa.

That was 25 years ago. Elizabeth II, Defender of the Faith and Head of the Commonwealth, celebrates her Silver Jubilee Sunday, only the third British monarch to do so in 200 years. Does it have any meaning in these times? Does it matter what times? Does it matter what kind of a Queen she has been? Is there any value any longer o the continuity of which she s the symbol?

When she became our Queen, 25 years ago, I do not have thrown his cloak from his shoulders, as Walter Ra-liegh had done for an earlier ground for her to walk on. It seems odd now to recall how seriously we talked and wrote then of a "New Elizabethan Age." England would again be green. England would again sing. England had a Queen.

I begrooms to recall how morning of the coronation of the new Queen, and it did indeed travel from mouth among the crowds in the streets, adding to the mysterious and joyful sensethat a "New Elizabethan Age" was to begin.

The lit all fell nower.

I happened to be in Westminster Abbey for the coronation. The most poignant moment in the ceremony was when she had been stripped of the robes in which she had arrived at the Abbey and stood the monarchy as an instituthe robes in which she had arrived at the Abbey, and stood alone among her peers and subjects in a white shift. At that moment she has been symbolically divested of all power and all pomp. Then, one by one, the Robe was placed on her, the Crown set on her head, the Sword presented to her, the Orb put in one hand, the Sceptre in the other, all symbols of her authority, all given to her by her subjects.

The Queen is aware of this, and her really striking achievement has been to do as much as anyone could have done, slightly to change the monarchy so that it is more acceptable, but to keep enough of the majesty and mystery without which it has no purpose. Draft Move Is Logical -From Mainland Angle some Western Lacrosse Association clubs decided to press for a universal draft of graduating juniors the spring after a Dominion junior championship had been won in our town.

The shoe is on the other foot now, or could it be that the Vancouver thinking was: "There is no way the Shamrocks are going to get Kevin Alexander.'

The move was logical from a mainland viewpoint. Rocks last year weren't that far away from being a Mann Cup contender and a couple of players like Alexander and MacDonalds' equally-talented Bob Cool might just be enough to put them over the top. So why help them?

On the other hand, who's to say that Nanaimo doesn't deserve first chance at signing the all-time junior scoring champion? As for an open draft, maybe Nanaimo is eyeing someone else. Who knows? They don't otherwise appear to

Sure the Rocks would like to have Alexander playing here. They would be foolish not to. Alexander has come up through the minors, has set all sorts of records along the way, is one of the most unselfish players in the game, is now making his living in business here and it would seen only proper that he continue to play his lacrosse here.

Of course, that's up to him. A couple of years ago he could have commanded a big price to go professional. Now he will have to wait until it happens again. Meanwhile, he'll play where he wants to play and the league will be better because of his presence. It has been said he may find senior company a little tougher, but it never bothered him in a scoring way before. And that's his talent. When he was a juvenile it wasn't unusual for him to play for the Rocks as a fill-in and come up with a hat trick for the occasion.

And with Cool as a teammate, that would make the roduction potential even greater. They have worked hand-inglove long enough now that each can sense the other's moves. And it would not surprise this observer, if Cool comes into his LANGLEY — Young Steve Skillings of the Victoria Curl-ing Club gambled and won here Friday night in the open-ing round of the eight-rink Paeific Coast Curling Associa-tion championships.

Skillings, 21, ignored a draw for a single point in the fourth end his match against Max Gordon of North Vancouver Recreation Centre, went for a double takeout, made it and counted three to take a 4-1 lead. He then stole four in the fifth end and was on his way to a convincing 9-4 victory.

Tim Horrigan, the other VCC entry, couldn't get his game together against Jerry Martin of the Vancouver Curling Club and was a first-round loser in the double-loss competition, 9-5.

The dignity of labor is nowhere better shown than by the elderly career waiters of many European countries. Impressive in bearing, sage in advice, fluent in many languages they lend a splendid air of authority to their establishments. Neither servile, nor supercilious, they demonstrate that only a lifetime of experience can produce the fully trained waiter.

Low cost that's the ticket:

when you take a trip on an Advance Booking Charter flight, you're travelling on the most economical fare plan there is. And when you tly with Intervac via Wardair. Canada's Holiday Airline, you're doing even better and here's how.

Meet the crew:

on board your Wardair arcraft, a full-complement of flight attendants is at your service—more than on any other North American arcline. They ll bring you imported wine with your meal, for example, and bar service, including your choice of after dinner liqueurs—all at no extra cost. (You'd pay for drinks and wine on Air Canada "Chatter Class" fares.

We go non-stop:

all Wardair flights to Britain are non-stop every Thursday and Sunday to London, on Thursdays to Manchester, and every Wednesday to Prestwick. Coming back'rs just as easy. On London flights, you can choose to stay away 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 8 or even 10 weeks. (With "Charter Class" fares on Air Canada, you can only stay away a maximum of 45 days—with us, up to 70 days.) On Manchester flights, you can stay away 3, 4 or 5 weeks, and on Prestwick flights for 2, 3, 4 or 6 weeks. It's all the same to us, all the same low price to you.

Galley at your service:

when you fly Wardair, you enjoy delicted hot meals on board. The menu usually reads: fresh garden salad, filet migno with vegetables, dessert, tea or coffee all served on china.

Baggage below:

when you fly Wardair to Britain, you enjoy the benefit of our generous 66 lbs. free baggage allow ance. [You are only allowed 44 lbs. on Air Canada's "Charter Class" tares.) All the more tor you to bring home great buys from the U.K. when you fly Wardair. Cabin comforts: vour flight attendants will do all they can to make your flight as comfortable as possible. It wou teel like 40 winks, your seat tilts back; and blanket and pillow are yours for the asking. On our 747s, a flight attendant will bring your personal audio headset (at no extra-charge on Wardair – you'd have to pay extra on Air Canadal, so you can listen to your tayounte kind of music whenever you teel like it without disturbing a soul.

We're with you when you land too:

tew nights to arranging a complete trip that includes, say, a Mediterra nean cruise or a motor coach tour of Britain or Europe – all you have to do is ask. Intervac makes it all so casy. See below for more details.

Royal Viking Line Spring and Summer cruises.

The very best ports. At the very best times of the year.

Right now, your travel agent is featuring 17 Royal Viking Line cruises that let you visit some of the world's most fascinating places at the very best times of the year.

Mexico and the Caribbean in the mildness of March. The Mediterranean in April, before the tourists arrive. The British Isles and Norwegian Fjords in the merry month of May. Northern Europe, including Russia, in the long, warm days of summer.

You can sail for as few as 9 days. Or for 17 days. Or for as many as 68 days. Because there are seventeen of these cruises to choose from aboard the sparkling white ships of Royal Viking Line. Of Norwegian registry. And spirit.

And no matter which cruise you decide on, you will enjoy our unmistakable sailing style. Ours are World Class ships. Offering a level of elegance, comfort, and spacious

Our ships carry 500 passengers, to give everyone aboard an added feeling of space and freedom. The staterooms offer ocean views to 94% of all passengers. The dining room, set high on an upper deck, is large enough to serve everyone at a single, relaxed seating. And to see that you are cared for in the best Continental tradition, there are three attentive crew members for every five passengers.

This is cruising as you always dreamed it would be: a marvelous, exhilarating adventure. And that's how it can be for you this year. Just call your travel agent. Nobody can better help you plan your cruise. Best of all your travel agent's advice is not only price-less – it's free. Royal Viking Line, Dept. G-53 One Embarcadero Center, San Francisco,

Last year, seven—Canadian vessels took part in the seal harvest on The Front and the same number is expected this spring.

The quota for small-boat sealers and landsmen-local St. Lawrence and off the northeast coast of New-foundland, has been set at foundland, has been set at 63,000—twice last year's allot-

The increased allotment will mean much to Newfoundland fishermen, as the hunt provides thousands with a seasonal livelihood through the sale of pelts. It also provides a supply of meat for their families.

Between 8,000 and 9,000 per sonal sealing licences are issued to Newfoundland fi-shermen each year and close to 200 yessels are licensed to participate in the hunt. Most are of the longliner type erating from shore.

The 1976 season for smallhoat sealers was one of the best in recent years, and fa-verable ice and weather con-ditions on The Front allowed the large vessels to fill the Canadian quota.

Tennis Racquets Become Polish Status Symbols

WARSAW (Reuter)— Tennis has become the latest stepping stone for Poles who aspire to be middle-class in a theoretically classless society.

Well-off and influential parents have decided that tennis, along with ballet or deportment classes and French, are useful rungs in the ladder of upward mobilitheir arms, in a club of their own, privileged young Poles feel themselves above the soccer masses and the bicy-cling crowd.

A second language is another status symbol. While English may be more useful, French carries more cultural

These same people also have an urge to immerse themselves in the 19th century Polish classics, although these were written under Russian occupation and contain nationalist passages which present authorities feel are best forgotten.

Yearning for the past has to rearming for the past has to be fitted into Poland's socialist mould. While a small group of privileged youth develops a style of its own, for milions in this impoverished country the first need is to save for years to acquire a small apartment, and leisure for most comes mainly through the television set.

While Poland's post-war communism crushed classes together it did not destroy them, as happened in the Soviet Union.

Today the Polish middle class is a kaleidoscopic mix ture of former aristocrats and landowners, rich bourgeoisis, intelligentsia, rich farmers, shop-owners, professional peo-ple, officers and academics.

From this crush of mixed backgrounds, standards and educational levels is emerging an outcrop of young Poles who may eventually go one better than middle class and become a kind of Socialist gentry or minor Communist

Blouses to top everything

Isn't it nice to read about all the new things for spring?

Almost makes one forget the dull days we've been having!...So here's more spring news... Impacts 'n' Imports have just received some delightful blouses from Paul Rogers and Bieyle... From the former there's a red and white, or black and white, acrylic knit with horizontal stripes and tie belt... Short sleeves acrylic knit with horizontal stripes and tie belt. Short sleeves and collared V neck. Long enough to come well down over your tanny when you're wearing pants. The other Paul Rogers is pure cotton, with long sleeves and collarless shirt neck. Limoges, dune or cucumber, in sizes 6 to 16. A large scarf which could also be worn as a belt, goes with this . Great for cruising . ideal for the gal who can't take too much sun . $25. The Bleyle polyester knit shirt blouses are very smart. Swirly patterns on white . . combinations of red/navy/turquoise and navy/yellow . These come with either long or short sleeves, at $33 and $30 respectively . There's a divine ribbed polyester top with short sleeves, $25 and a white top with long sleeves and mock turtle neck at the same price . Bleyle polyester pants to match . Impacts 'n' Imports, & Centennial Square, 388-7023.

Fabrics that sing of spring

Now we know why Eaton's call their tabric department the 'Fabric Garden'... because that's exactly what it looked like when he dropped by last Monday... with all the new spring fabrics looking so fresh and colorful!... Eyelets, ginghams, stripes, prints, knits plains... in silks, cottons, polyester and a multitude of blends... enough to make any woman who sews want to run for her machine!... There are raw silks of different types in natural colors, which would make up into gorgeous suits, dressy pantsuits, etc... with white silk organdy for those fluffy blouses which are part of the new feminine look... Striped acrylics and cottons in all sorts of combinations... and only $4.99 a yard... Loved the polysprints with the new ethnic look. The evelet embroideries prints as well as plain colors. Ideal for blouses and kiddies or bridesmaids dresses... There are seer-suckers in prints, stripes and gingham patterns. New fabrics which look like linen but are actually crease-proof blends various widths and lovely new spring colors. Some real old-fashioned ginghams... and fine cotton prints... small dainty patterns... reminiscent of Liberty of London! Eaton's Fabric Garden, 382-7141, loc. 233.

Flowers speak eloquently of love

May we remind you that St. Valentine's Day is a week from Monday and suggest that nothing but nothing will be more expressive of your affection than a gift of flowers! Mrs. Fitzsimmons at Island Florist showed us a sample of the FTD special which you can send anywhere in the U.S. and Canada It's a lovely bouquet of white mums, pink carnations and daisies with a big heart and a couple of doves looking for all the world like an old-fashioned valentine card! All you have to do is pick up the phone and tell Island Elorist where you'd like one to go! Naturally both Island Florist and Norma's Avenue Florist make up their own special arrangements and designs for Valentine's and believe us, their designs are superb! Both shops have a profusion of spring flowers right now Daffodils iris tulips the delicate freesia. And pots of growing flowers which some people prefer because they're so long-lasting. So say "Happy Valentine's Day" with flowers this year trome either of these two lovely-flower shops. And remember, flowers are for ANY occasion especially at times of bereavement flowers can express your sympathy better than any words! Usland Florist, 744 Yates St., 383-0743 and Norma's Avenue Florist, 1842 Oak Bay Ave. 595-1224.

Healer tells stories of miracle cures

In Rev. A. C. McKaig's last crusade, 300 persons were saved and 470 received the baptism of the Holy Ghost with the evidence of speaking in tongues.

McKaig talked about his 28 years of evangelism and healing in an interview this week. He talked about shriveled arms straightening out, short legs causing backache being lengthened.

He talked about the curing of cancer, heart trouble, ar-thritis, diabetes and other afflictions. He said teeth had been straightened, and teeth had been filled miraculously

McKaig said people were much impressed by the healings, but the most important part of his message was the

"We preach the Word first," he said. "The miracles come after that." McKaig said God had given him the power of healing be-cause he believed. "It's in John 14:12." he said. "He that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also." that I do shall he do also."

The 59-year-old Pentecostal minister is at the People's Community Church, Princess and Chambers, at 7:30 p.m. Monday to Friday, at Holyrood House at 11 a.m. and 7:30 p.m. Sundays.
"God has given me some very strong miracles here in Canada," the healer said. "In Calgary three years ago, a

At best a few inflated egos;

It's a project that's about to be launched and will more than likely kindle a favorable reaction among an innocent and naive portion of the public and some of those persons who will be inevitably aware that they are in line to receive one of the statuettes already entitled "Vici". (By the way, is that to be pronounced vicki,

ETHIOPIAN ICONS (AN ILLUSTRATED LECTURE)

Ethiopia comes within the sphere of Oriental Christianity, and her art is the only art on African soil to survive 1600 years of historical and cultural adaptation. The lecture will survey the religious and cultural themes developed in Ethiopian icons which date from the 15th to the 19th century, and discuss the making and nature of this form of sacred art.

Lecturer: S. Chojnacki, Librarian of the Institute of Ethiopian Studies, University College of Addis Ababa.

Offered in co-operation with the Department of History in Art, University of Victoria, and the British Columbia Provincial Museum.

Monday, February 14, 8:00 p.m., Clearihue 106, University of Victoria campus. Fee $3.00

CORRIE TEN BOOMS WHY DOES A GOOD LOVE PERMIT

EVIL? THE BIBLE GIVES THE BEAUTIFUL ANSWER

When Pilate asks our Lord "Knowest Thou not that I have power to crucify Thee and power to release Thee?" Jesus answered him "Thou couldst have no power at all except it were given thee of my Father." John 19:10, 11. Does this mean that God allows evil to happen? The above Scriptures seem to say that, don't they? Our whole life experience proves this, death, disease, wars, corruption, pollution of the environment, starvation in a world of plenty, etc., etc. But there's another side to this coin, God knows as we do, experience is the best teacher, soon God's kingdom will be established as Christians are told to pray "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on Earth as it is in Heaven" and when men return in the Resurrection, they will appreciate God's righteous loving leadership, because of their first-hand experience with evil. compositions by Bach will be presented at St. John's Church, Quadra at Mison, by Edward Norman.

First of these will take place Wednesday at 8 p.m. and will include three Preludes and Fugues—the ludes and Fugues—the "Great" G major, the "Great" C major, and the virtuoso D major compositions.

The two programs have been devised to show off the fine pipe organ at St. John's which is voiced in a manner highly sympathetic to the music of Bach and the classical and baroque periods.

Second concert in the series takes place Feb. 16.

Tea Helped Kick Habit

heavy smokers in Japan say they have kicked the habit by drinking, "quit-smoking tea." Doctors and health authorities shrug it off as another folk

The brown liquid, a little more bitter than ordinary black tea, has sold about 1,000 packs a month since last September, says the Kaiyo-

Bokujo company, which dis-tributes the tea. Kinen-cha translates literally as "quit-smoking tea" and is said to make eigarettes taste bad and help smokers give

Its popularity shot up after a monthly health magazine featured the tea, made from roasted, dried tea leaves, in its June issue.

Harumichi Iguchi, a spokes-man for the company, said the tea was first taken to his company president, Toshiro Kaneko, by a Japañese woman, Itsuko Kawase, who asked for testing and possible distribution.

The woman, a 32-year-old tea trader, told him she had been given a handful of the tea leaves by a Chinese friend, who had brought it from a mountainous region of Kunming, southern China, in the spring of 1976.

Subsequent tests, involving more than 1,000 smokers, have shown that four of every 10 who have tried the tea have become non-smokers and others have been able to cut their smoking by 30 to 80 per cent, he said.

'We still don't know exactly what brings about the so-called quit-smoking effect, but tests so far have showed no sign of ill effects. So we decid-ed to go into market."

Each pack contains six tea bags and costs the equivalent of $10. Two to three cups daily are recommended with re-sults apparent in a few days to a week, he said.

Doctors and medical experts are generally skeptical. Some say the effect is brought about merely by "auto-suggestion."

A spokesman for the priva-tely-owned Far East Medical Institute, which conducted an examination of the tea, said it tends to shift the consumer's body from acidity to alkalinity. This is believed to be the main effect.

Iguichi said that at least 3,000 smokers have quit thanks to the tea, judging from letters, postcards and 'I didn't believe it at all." said Toshiaki Keneko, a 40-vear-old company president. "I used to pick up a cigarette every 20 minutes. But a few days after I started drinking the stuff, I smoked only a few a day. Now I feel no need for cigarettes."

Lung Illness Traced To Grain

SASKATOON (CP) genetic variation may contrib-ute to lung disease in some grain elevator agents, say re-searchers at University of Saskatchewan.

Sandra Horne, of the university's medical genetics unit, said the gene in question controls a blood protein and is abnormal in about two per cent of the population.

The protein, alpha-l-anti-trypsin, balances the action of other types of protein that de-strop bacteria in the body. When other types of protein are not kept in balance, they apparently begin to "chew up" non-bacterial matter such as damaged lung tissue.

Ms. Horne said a largescale study in Arizona showed no difference in health be-tween persons with and without the gene variant.

However, the grain dust in which elevator agents work apparently helped cause changes in the lungs of people who have the gene variant and associated protein imbal-

A recent study of 1,400 elevator agents in Saskatchewan showed that on average agents with the gene variant had undergone more changes in their lungs than agents without the variant.

The changes include a les-ening of lung elasticity, Ms.

After 10 years of working in clevators the affected agents could no longer breathe out at the same rate as other

The changes found in the lungs might eventually develop into emphysema. The findings had been suggested in earlier reports but had never before been she said. The researchers said the The researchers said the next step is to prove grain dust is what actually caused deterioration in the lungs of elevator agents. One research group is working on a study of the components of grain dust, which is known to include grain parti-cles, mould spores and silica.

A TEST ON TAL

Mikhael Tal is known to have a phenomenal memory and fellow Russian Grandmaster Alvar Gipsiis decided to test it.
"Say," he asked Tal, "can you recall which variation of the Queen's Gambit Keres played against Boleslavsky in the fourth round of the Twentieth USSR Championshipp" Tal looked at Gipsiis in astonishment. "You must think I'm stupid," he replied. "Keres played Boleslavsky in the 19th round, Keres had the black pieces, and it wasn't a Queen's Gambit, it was a Ruy Lopez!" It is usually best to dig one clump at a time, wash it well with the hose, and examine the crown for growth buds. With a sharp spade, cut into pieces each containing one or two good, plump buds; discard any odd pieces.

Plant the cuss three feet apart in the centre of the new bed, setting each piece with the growth buds about three inches below the surface. This spring, when the bed has set-

Yours may be that one gar-den where rhubarb is accorded ed royal treatment, in which case you are fully aware of the delicate and delicious flavor associated with well-grown stalks. Dust the bed surface, not over the crowns, with 6-8-6 fertilizer raking it carefully into the top 2 ins.ofsoil. It is just about impossible In most gardens this plant is relegated to an out-of-the-way corner where the soil is poor and often beyond the reach of the sprinkler, caus-

It is just about impossible to incorporate too much old manure and compost when making a new rhubarb bed. Commercial producers use 80 to 120 tons of manure to the acre compared with 20 to 30 tons for other farm crops. Sidedress the bed each fall ing the family to complain that rhubarb is tough, sour and unpalatable.

If not in a back corner, it is probably where it was planted 10 or 20 years ago in soil that is worn out, and the family's opinion is much the same.

Because rhubarb is a hardy robust plant, producing its leaf stalks under the most adverse conditions, few gardeners give it the care and attention it needs. Without a rich soil, good drainage and wifficient water in supmer sufficient water in summer, the stalks cannot be anything but stringy and tough.

Quite often a new planting from divisions of the crowns already in the garden can be made to produce rhubarb over which the family will place in full sun away from fences and walls so that cul-tivation and mulching can be tween each planted crown Next dig one spade deep into Line the bottom of this trench with several inches of rough, partially decayed com-post. Break some of the sub-soil into small pieces and put a layer over the compost. Re-peat, layer on layer of compost and subsoil, so that the compost holds the subsoil open and improves drainage.

Mix the topsoil with an equal quantity of compost, or really old manure, add a fair amount of bonemeal and mix well. Fill in the trench. The finished level should be 3 to 4 ins. above the surrounding soil to allow for sinking.

Lift one (or more) clumps of rhubarb from the old plant-arried out on all sides. Remove the top soil from a strip three feet wide, and long enough to allow three feet be-and spring with old mamure or compost, remembering not to bury the crowns. Add a dusting of bonemeal in the fall and a dusting of 6-8-6 in the spring.

Whether an old bed is to be remade, or a new stock is purchased, the work should be done as early as possible this month. The first small picking will be made in spring of 1979.

A lot of home garden rhubarb roots are completely spoiled through over-picking. Throughout the season there must be enough expanded leaf surface exposed to the sun to make food and provide a good before the leaves wilt in fall. Unless this is done the leaf Inless this is done the leaf talks will be thin and tough.

To obtain the full sweetness of any variety the leaves must be allowed to fully expand and remain at least 7 days in sunshine before the stalks are pulled. The sugar content will be greater still if left for 14 days.

Rhubarb stalks are pulled, not cut. The stem is grasped near its base, pressed gently backward away from the crown, then freed with a sharp upward pull. The old gardeners' rule is that all pulling of rhubarb must stop as soon as the first gooseberries are ripe, and there is wisdom behind this In the first place it means that enough foliage will be eleft to feed the crown for next year's crop.

the green is removed from the top of the stalk when the leaves are cut off.

As the season progresses some of this oxalic acid is drawn into the stalks as food is moved down to the crown for storage. Not only is late pulling harmful to the plants,

This spring add a few plants of Angelica on the sunny side of the new rhubarb bed,

Angelica, like rhubarb, enjoys a good textured rich of any sharp fruit.

Angelica is not a sweetener but when used with rhubarb can be reduced to one-third or on e-quarter the normal amount needed to make the dish palatable.

Mr. Grit is the carpet killer!

Coit can save your carpets.

You track dirt from the street, yard and garden into your home every day. It collects as grit at the base of carpet fibers—grit that destroys those fibers with every step you take. Why pay a small fortune to replace your carpets? Save your carpets. Call Coit, the world's largest carpet cleaning specialist, for a free estimate.

Queen Marks 25 Years

On Sunday, the Queen marks the 25th anniversary of her ascension to the throne— only the third monarch to do so in 200 years.

Today, she spent a quiet day at Windsor Castle and her only public engagement Sun-day will be a drive through Windsor Great park to and from morning prayer in a chapel on the private grounds of Royal Lodge, four miles from the castle.

The provincial government sent a telegram Friday to Queen Elizabeth, congratula-ing her on the anniversary. The government also pro-claimed the week of Feb. 6 to silver anniversary week in CHICAGO — The rush-hour crash on the elevated railway Friday night which claimed 1! lives may have been caused by a motorman cheating on the safety-braking system.

Any other explanation for loads of passengers hurtled to the street 20 feet below the track would be almost impossible, according to James McDonough, chairman of the Chicago Transit Authority. (See picture Page 3.)

Victoria's only major fish processing plant — Oakland Industries Ltd. — is going out

Thirty salaried employees have been laid off and any hopes the plant would provide about 300 jobs for the herring season which opens later this month have been dashed.

Bill Hilborn, owner of the plant at 630 Montreal, said today the decision to close down the plant was made Friday after a meeting between the Bank of B.C. and the federal Business Development Bank.

He said the two banks were the said the two banks were unable to agree who would come first for security for a temporary operating loan that would allow the company to carry on -business at least until the herring season started.

The company's financial problems came to a head Jan. 18 when the Bank of B.C. placed the business in receivership and appointed the accounting firm of Dunworthy and Co as receivers.

At the time Oakland had a $1.8 million operating loan with the bank.

Hilborn said a large Japa-nese trading firm which he declined to name had agreed to finance the company for the herring season.

Hilborn said he found it ironical that "on the one hand we had a foreign firm doing everything it could to keep our operation going and the Canadian financial institutions on the other hand not thinking was worthwhile."

He said events moved so quickly he didn't have time to look for alternative sources of financing.

"I am particularly disappointed for the staff and loyal employees, some of whom have worked for us for 18 years," Hilborn said. "But none of us were able to combat the odds without financial"

Plant' superintendent Gord Lindquist, who finds himself out of work for the first time in eight years, said today he is appalled by the lack of support from the government.

"The city of Victoria, has lost $10 million because of this thing," he said. "That's the amount of money that passed through the company each

That's the opinion of fish-eries officials and biologists concerned at the lack of snow cover on the higher slopes of island and coastal mountains. Concern for the fisheries resources follows a provincial water rights branch report Friday that the snowpack on
